Introducing VERSES

Supporting Literacy, Celebrating Community

Literacy programs nationwide lost tutors, learners and general community awareness during the COVID-19 pandemic, and TCCL's Ruth G. Hardman Adult Literacy Service was no exception. Inspired by these challenges, VERSES is a fundraising event that aims to generate money for this literacy service, educate attendees on the importance of adult literacy initiatives in Tulsa County, and offer a unique way to explore local artists, businesses and community offerings.

"VERSES is a hybrid of a market, an auction, an art show and performances. It's also an opportunity for us to raise awareness around our literacy program and why we are needed in the community," said VERSES creator Mandy Durham, who is TCCL's literacy services manager. The ticketed event includes performances from Oklahoma-based artists, food and beverage for purchase from area restaurants, and an auction and vendor market showcasing local makers and businesses.

Although VERSES is a fundraiser at its core, the event foremost aims to generate awareness about TCCL's literacy efforts and cultivate connections among community members and organizations. At this event, Durham hopes to prioritize community over financial gain and align with the renewed spirit of community support Tulsa has seen in recent years.

"I have noticed an increased sense of community-mindedness in the Tulsa arts scene that has encouraged a greater number of DIY arts spaces, grassroots organizations and mutual aid groups. As a result, I see people prioritizing community over profit. I see people thinking about how they can help others meet their own needs. I wanted to offer an event that encouraged such connection."

In line with Durham's vision, the vendor market is more than just shopping; it helps create an environment for exploration and unexpected interactions, much like the program offered through the Ruth G. Hardman Adult Literacy Service.

"One of my favorite parts about the literacy program is our one-to-one model," said Durham. "We make matches between tutors and learners, and in a lot of situations those folks may not have crossed paths otherwise. In fact, many tutors and learners go on to become friends, and these great relationships grow out of the program. I wanted to see that reflected in this event."

Not only will attendees have the chance to support local artists and businesses, but also they will get to discover new talents and ventures they might not have encountered otherwise. In a symbiotic relationship, the artists and vendors in attendance will get exposed to a new audience.

Explore your community at VERSES on Saturday, Sept. 30 from 6 to 9 p.m. at Central Library. To purchase tickets and view auction items, visit www.tulsalibrary.org/VERSES.

Meet a VERSES artist: Dan Lynh Pham

What is your background as an artist?

From my earliest memories, I've used art as my means of expression. As a child, I'd lose myself in hours of drawing and creating, and this passion has remained a constant throughout my life. Being an interdisciplinary artist, I'm all about embracing diverse media to infuse my art with versatility and growth. My work spans from digital art to traditional forms, mirroring the wide-ranging work I undertake.

I stepped into this artistic journey during college, prompted by a desire to explore my identity as a bridge between Asian and American cultures, questioning the complexities of my own identity and cultural expectations. With time, as my sense of self solidified, my focus evolved to spotlight the unique experiences of my Vietnamese upbringing in a predominantly white community. Now, my work thrives on celebrating these cultural elements, encouraging others to connect and learn, and reflecting on my upbringing as a child of immigrants.

What has your experience of the Tulsa arts scene been?

My immersion in the Tulsa arts scene has been a truly enriching journey. The local artistic community stands out with its unique blend of care and collaboration, all geared toward growth. Observing artists here coming together for collaborations, fundraisers and guerilla art events is inspiring. Tulsa's art scene feels exceptionally welcoming and tightly knit. It's a city that invests in its artists, fostering a sense of support and camaraderie. I've witnessed artists uniting to back one another, small businesses and the community as a whole, organizing fundraisers for small businesses and events to aid victims of adversity. This spirit of collaboration defines Tulsa's art community, transcending competition for a truly harmonious creative space.

What is next for you?

I've been honored with the Artists Creative Fund grant, fueling my project titled "I Bear the Fruit of My Ancestors." This dynamic project salutes Vietnam's indomitable history and unyielding spirit, all while amplifying the art of storytelling. A journey from my roots as a Vietnamese refugee in the heart of the American Midwest, this initiative aims to disentangle "Vietnam" from its perpetual war association. Using the traditional craft of Vietnamese lantern-making, I'm crafting a contemporary, ethereal installation. This project is a tribute to the generations preceding us, a symphony of resilience and sacrifices woven into a better tomorrow.

Meet a VERSES artist: Tulsa Artist Fellow Arthur Haywood

What is your background as an artist?

I got into art as a teenager by creating graffiti murals with schools, and by illustrating book covers. I hope my art encourages these youth to engage with books because I know how reading can open opportunities and inspire new trajectories.

collaborations. I got connected to folks at the Central High School and did a mural for them because one of the other Artist Fellows teaches there. Recently, Tulsa Artist Fellow and poet Phetote an artist named Pose2 at a community center in Philadelphia. My father, a state senator, organized reading camps, and my mother was president of the school board where I grew up. Through them, I was shown the influence of reading on the lives of students. As an avid reader who judges books by their cover, I was inspired to share stories through illustrated murals. Now I am focused on connecting with an audience of students, through murals I make for libraries and

What has your experience of the Tulsa arts scene been?

My Tulsa arts scene experience has been inspiring. As a Tulsa Artist Fellowship awardee, I've been exposed to the art of other fellows and noticed the different ways these artists engage the community, which has helped me see other directions I can take my own artistic practice in. This community has also allowed me to participate in different Mshairi published a collection of poetry and had me illustrate the book's cover.

What is next for you?

I'm currently working on murals for the MacArthur Elementary School and the Phoenix Rising Alternative School.

La Riqueza del Folclore Latinoamericano

Cuando hablamos de los países de Latinoamérica que es en lo primero que piensas ¿Comida? O ¿Música? ¿Literatura? El hablar del arte folclórico en Latinoamérica es darte cuenta que es un tema que no tiene fin, pues es tan rico y colorido que nos distingue a todos desde México hasta la Patagonia. El folclore está lleno de historias que te envuelven, pues la experiencia de crear y ser parte te llevan a descubrir esa riqueza por la que se les conoce a los latinos. El folclore se puede definir como un conjunto de tradiciones, cuentos, leyendas, creencias, costumbres o expresiones que son el legado cultural de un grupo. Las tradiciones de México son un patrimonio cultural muy apreciado y ampliamente reconocido en muchos países del mundo, una de ellas son las calaveritas literarias, son una composición en verso tradicional en México. Suelen escribirse en vísperas del Día de Muertos; son variadas en cuestión de versos, tienen rima, a veces tonos irónicos o burlesco y normalmente solo están en México. El Día de Muertos es una festividad de origen prehispánico, en la cual el pueblo celebra y honra a sus familiares fallecidos, otra tradicción folclórica latina es la de Inti Raymi (o Fiesta del Sol) es una conmemoración inca y andina en Perú y se celebra cada 24 de junio. Los peruanos festejan el inicio de un nuevo año solar con mucha música, bailes y vestimentas propias de la civilización anterior. En Colombia la Feria de las Flores, en Medellín, es una fiesta colorida y llena de aroma. Tiene como objetivo recordar, conservar y perpetuar los valores de Antioquia y generalmente se realiza en el mes de agosto, la Fiesta de la Vendimia, en Mendoza, Argentina celebra el fin de la cosecha de la uva y su transformación en vino entre el 28 de febrero y el 7 de marzo, con baile, música, vestuario y mucho más.

A través de una serie donde podremos enriquecer nuestros conocimientos culturales de sesiones, talleres y oportunidades de establecer contactos con una increíble lista de organizaciones que sirven a los latinos, y así poder maximizar nuestra visión global de 10 a.m. a 3 p.m.

Ven y empápate de arte y cultura este 30 de septiembre en la biblioteca Central y se parte de VERSES aquí la biblioteca se transformará en un encantador mercado nocturno en el que se darán cita autores locales de pequeñas editoriales y de publicaciones independientes, artistas y una gran variedad de vendedores locales.
