Tulsans of all ages are encouraged to participate in the Tulsa City-County Library's annual summer reading program, which continues through Aug. 4.

The program includes family-oriented events at various branch libraries designed to encourage reading and expand imaginations. In addition, those who sign up and complete reading a certain number of books will be eligible to win a variety of prizes.

Children who are in the fifth grade or younger who visit the library at least four times and read eight books will receive a coupon book for free goods and services. For those in grades 6 through 12, six books are necessary to earn the coupon book. In addition, those who complete the program will be eligible for drawings for such items as bicycles and video games, free food and gift cards.

For adults, the requirement is at least four books, which includes audio books.

Tulsa Mayor G.T. Bynum has issued a friendly challenge to mayors in Skiatook, Sand Springs, Sperry, Collinsville, Broken Arrow, Owasso, Glenpool, Jenks and Bixby to see which community can have the highest percentage of children enrolled in Tulsa City-County Library's Summer Reading Program.

The winning community will receive a special plaque to display for the year, as well as bragging rights for earning the distinction as a community of active readers. The readers at the Skiatook Library won the competition last year.

To enroll in the program and to see a complete lists of programs and prizes, call 918-549-7323, or visit tulsalibrary.org/summer.
