Meet the winners of the 2018 Women of the Year-Pinnacle Awards.

The 2018 Women of the Year-Pinnacle Awards will honor 10 outstanding Tulsans as part of “The Pearl Party.”

The awards, a collaborative effort of the YWCA Tulsa and the Mayor’s Commission on the Status of Women, honors women who personify the mission of YWCA — to eliminate racism and empower women — and who uphold the legacy of the Pinnacle Awards, which is reflected in women who are role models in their professions, take risks on behalf of others, perform community service and advocate for women’s issues.

This year’s recipients are:

- Premadonna Braddick, executive director of Soaring Eagles Youth and Family Services and founder ## of Girls' Teen Summit

- Deborah Hunter, poet and champion for mental health
- Kimberly Johnson, CEO of the Tulsa City-County Library
- Virginia Lewis, champion for survivors of sexual abuse and advocate for legislative change
- Faatimah McLemore, volunteer executive director for The Surayya Anne Foundation
- Julie E. Miller-Cribbs, MSW, Ph.D., community leader for students and professionals working to address health disparities, adverse childhood experiences and healthcare accessibility
- Carola Munoz de Cote, champion for equitable education in the Latina community
- Priya Raju, mentor to young girls and director of Kripalaya Dance Academy
- Renee Sites, advocate for reducing barriers within the deaf community
- Kim Teehee, vice president of Government Relations for Cherokee Nation Businesses and director of Government Relations for Cherokee Nation.

In addition, former Tulsa Mayor Kathy Taylor will be presented with the Anna C. Roth Legacy Award, in recognition of her longtime service to Tulsa and Oklahoma.
