Kids love movies. Parents like inexpensive entertainment options, and they love fun for little ones that's free of charge.

Many movie theaters in the Tulsa area this summer are presenting free or reduced-price family films — all rated G or PG — in a popular weekly series format.

There are a few conditions to be aware of, some concessions specials, and the prices vary between theaters. You can note these in the following movie theater lineups of summer movies for kids and families.

Arrive early — these popular shows sometimes sell out.

BROKEN ARROW WARREN THEATRE

Upwards of 20,000 guests attended the Broken Arrow luxury theater's ultra-popular summer movie series for kids that began last summer with an amazing offer: Children age 13 and younger get not only free movies, but also free concessions and live entertainment at the theater.

Admission to these movies for those age 14 and older, including adults, will also be free. The shows begin next week and will take place at 10 a.m. Tuesdays, with doors opening at 9 a.m.

Some things to know: The free tickets will be limited to six per adult for each movie; all tickets will be for reserved seating; tickets must be picked up in person at the theater box office and will not be available online; the tickets can be picked up as early as the Saturday before each Tuesday showing.

Broken Arrow Warren Theatre is located at 1700 W. Aspen Creek Drive in Broken Arrow, south of the Creek Turnpike between Aspen Avenue and Elm Place.

SUMMER MOVIES @ CIRCLE CINEMA

Tulsa's arthouse gem is teaming up with the Tulsa City-County Library's summer reading program to show family-friendly films for free in July.

But that's not all: Children ages 17 and younger who attend these shows at Circle Cinema, 10 S. Lewis Ave., will also receive a free concession. A child can choose between a popcorn, a drink or a candy bar.

These shows will take place at 1 p.m. on Tuesdays in July (July 5, 12, 19, 26). Those interested are instructed to call 918-549-7584 to learn the movie titles that will be scheduled.

The program "is a great partnership with Kendall-Whittier Library," said Chuck Foxen, the film programmer for the theater, "bringing books, movies and community together to share an experience at Circle Cinema. It's a real gift to children in Tulsa."

CINEMARK'S SUMMER MOVIE CLUBHOUSE

Two of the area's Cinemark theaters are offering a low-price deal on movies for kids: The Summer Movie Clubhouse has movies priced at $1 per show, but there are also advance tickets available to see all of the movies in the series for a $5 "bundle price."

The participating theaters are the Cinemark Broken Arrow (1801 E. Hillside Drive) and the Cinemark Sand Springs (1112 E. Charles Page Blvd.), and each is showing the same films each week.
