The Great Bradini performed at Broken Arrow Library South last week, telling the children in the room they are super students and by working together they could become a super class.

With some magic music, Bradini moved on to cool science and magic for the audience, playing to a full crowd of parents and children.

The end message was, "There's a hero in you."

1. Laura Raphael, youth librarian at South Broken Arrow Library gets a kick out of being named World's Greatest Super Hero, having beaten Superman, Wonder Woman, Spiderman and any number of others. 2. Bradini attracted such a crowd. 3. Delight and giggles are the name of the game when Bradini shows his magic with science. 4. A boy from the audience "gives a hand" to help Bradini with a magic trick. The test drive with a carrot didn't go so well.
