Tulsa Shock players will participate in Storytime with the Tulsa Shock as part of the Tulsa City-County Library's children's and teen summer reading programs.

The Rudisill Regional Library, which is at 1520 N. Hartford Ave., will host the event at 3 p.m. July 9. Players will share their favorite children's books and talk about the importance of maintaining a strong mental and physical balance.

The libraries give participants until Aug. 1 to complete the summer reading program and receive a coupon booklet for food and entertainment in Tulsa County, including a ticket to see the Tulsa Shock take on the Phoenix Mercury at the BOK Center at 7 p.m. July 30.

"It's important for children to see professional athletes and celebrities taking time to enjoy reading," Cher Lyons, Rudisill Regional Library's children's librarian, said in a release. "The Tulsa Shock organization has been wonderful in supporting literacy and libraries. I think the players who have come to read in libraries enjoy it as much as the children do."

WHY VETERANS REMEMBER
Ken Renberg, 100, still remembers the day he was shot down over the Pacific in 1945.

Talking the talk

Ken Renberg, a German-American Jew, interrogated German POWs

Ken Renberg, a German-American Jew, was one of the few American soldiers who were captured by the Germans during World War II. He was held in a POW camp for over a year and was interrogated by the Germans.

Despite the hardships and dangers, Renberg remained loyal to his country and his fellow soldiers. He was eventually released and returned home.
