

Business Album

Celebrate Pink OKC

Oklahoma Project Woman hosted its Celebrate Pink OKC fundraiser at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club on Nov. 19. Guests came together to support the battle against breast cancer and enjoyed food and a showing of spring 2015 fashions direct from the New York runways by designers Nicole Miller, Carmen Marc Valvo and Rachel Zoe. Proceeds will specifically go toward helping women and men in the Oklahoma City community. From left, Celebrate Pink OKC event organizers and Oklahoma Project Woman staff members pose with the president and owner of r meyers, Cindi Shelby; Chairwoman Marion Paden, Shelby, Vice Chairwoman Kathy L. Williams, OPW Executive Director Anne Bogle, OPW Development Director Scarlet Henley, Honorary Chairwoman Carol Troy and OPW Community Development Manager Margaux Lippold. COURTESY PHOTO

Lab work

The Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation recently hosted a meeting of its National Advisory Council. The group, made up of business leaders from Oklahoma City and across the United States, visited laboratories in OMRF's immunobiology and cancer research program. Fred Hall, right, OMRF National Advisory Council member, tries his hand at pipetting under the guidance of lab manager Maria McDowell. COURTESY PHOTOS

One for the books

The Tulsa City-County Library received the 2014 Oklahoma Quality Award for Pursuit of Excellence from the Oklahoma Quality Foundation at a presentation in Oklahoma City featuring Gov. Mary Fallin. The Tulsa City-County Library is one of five recipients for 2014 and is the first library system in the state to win an Oklahoma Quality Award. Shown are Mayor Dewey Bartlett, left, and Gary Shaffer, Tulsa City-County Library CEO. COURTESY PHOTOS

Graduate student Amanda Templeton, left, shows OMRF National Advisory Council member Cathy Keating equipment used in the cancer research laboratory.