Skiatook Library will go extra mile to get what you want

By Linda Wallace

Skiatook Library*

January is not the usual time to think of float trips down a lazy river, but we do have a wonderful system which is called "floating" here at the library.

Some of our collections are floating, which means that when an item is requested from another location for a Skiatook patron, it stays here until it is requested somewhere else. This gives our large print, teen/tween, early reading/picture books, and media collections some new materials for you to browse on a regular basis. These collections change from day to day, by your or other local patrons' holds.

Speaking of holds, we are one big library made up of 25 locations. You may request an item from any of the locations and we will go pick it up for families or close friends may come in together and have their cards linked. This means that after this event, your friend or relative may use their card to access your account, for the purposes of picking up your materials for you. This is an excellent arrangement, but does require a high level of trust. If you or your linked persons lose an item, then the cardholder is still responsible financially for this item. Come by for a look at your local library. We are constantly changing to meet the needs of our community.
