After losing their mother Patti rather suddenly to Pancreatic Cancer, sisters Chrissy Harrison, of Glenpool, and Shauna Stewart, of Sand Springs, have made it their life's mission to aid the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network (PanCan) so that it may do for Pancreatic Cancer Research what the Susan G. Komen Foundation has done for Breast Cancer Research.

Harrison said Patti went to the hospital Dec. 18, 2011 complaining of back pain. On Dec. 23, 2011 a CT scan revealed Patti had Pancreatic Cancer. Patti died March 9, 2012, only three days after her 49th birthday and only 77 days after being diagnosed. "It was so sudden," said Stewart. "It just completely kicked our legs out from under us."

BIXBY

When Kelly Taliaferro retired as principal of North Intermediate School in Bixby, he never dreamed he would become Captain Kilowatt, a name he has earned by checking every building in the school system every day to make sure that all appliances are turned off, and that there's no running water that could indicate a leak. He visits the schools at night and works in the dark so as not to defeat his own purpose.

One might wonder if

JENKS

Tulsa City-County Library recently purchased a property on Main Street in Jenks.

"At this point the library system has just acquired the property," said TCCL Chief Executive Officer Gary Shaffer of the plot at 210 W. Main St. "We are very excited about development in the Jenks downtown area."

Despite the acquisition, according to Shaffer, the library system does not have any immediate plans to develop.

"Tulsa City-County Library does not have funding right now to build the library, but we are hopeful
