▲ Literacy learner Vy Tilton and literacy tutor Susanna Wills

Language learning improves literacy learners' lives

by Alex Mullin, communications specialist, Tulsa City-County Library

Five years ago, Vy Tilton's neighbor mentioned Tulsa City-County Library could help her learn English. Since then, the Vietnam native has met twice a week with tutor Susanna Wills through the library's Ruth G. Hardman Adult Literacy Service to improve her ability to speak, understand, read and write English.

"When I first came [to America], I was nervous. I didn't know if I would have someone to help me, but the library helped me a lot," Tilton said. The literacy service offers free and confidential basic literacy and English language instruction. Tilton initially joined a group English-learning program but quickly decided she wanted individual help. She signed up to become a learner and was thrilled when she got the call about being matched with a tutor.

"People would say to me, 'You speak English funny. We don't understand you.' That made me very sad," Tilton said. "How do you speak English when people say they don't understand you?"

"That was her biggest wish," said Wills. "To be able to speak English and be understood."

Tilton's desire to learn English was fueled by her desire to become a citizen and be recognized as American. Tilton loved the United States when she arrived a decade ago but said she has been a victim to acts of racism in recent years.

"People tell me I'm Asian, they are American. But I'm American, too. I took the [citizenship] test and passed it," Tilton said.

Now when people tell Tilton they don't understand her, she asks them for clarification. She writes down the words and brings them to Wills so they can discuss definitions and pronunciation. In this way, Tilton practices English constantly. She's also careful to ensure that she doesn't waste Wills' time.

"She's determined to make it all worthwhile," Wills said of Tilton. "And she does."

Wills became a tutor with TCCL's literacy service over six years ago after she and her husband, Henry, saw a call for tutors in the local paper. Motivated by their desire to help others, coupled with their previous teaching and tutoring experience, the Wills attended the tutor trainings together.

Susanna says her experience as a tutor has been fulfilling, rewarding and fun. She became a tutor to make a difference. Based on Tilton's progress and gratitude, Susanna has succeeded. However, she attributes Tilton's English success to Tilton's ambition.

"Some people, like Vy, are so determined and committed to learning. She's just amazing, and she works on [her English] all the time," Susanna said.

Henry Wills also works with a dedicated student. A native Spanish speaker from Peru, Gustavo Ferrer called the library over a year ago to ask about language-learning options. Although he works 12-hour days doing data entry, Gustavo still finds time to improve his English. His goal is to study at a university here in Tulsa.

"I'm a lawyer in my country, but the problem is the language," said Ferrer, who has been tutored by Henry for about a year. Within another year, Ferrer expects to feel confident enough in his English skills to apply to school.

"I like working with someone who really wants to learn," Henry said. "Gustavo prepares and does his homework. He's consistent, and we have a good time together. We have fun."

Susanna also described her tutoring experience with Tilton as fun. She encourages others to consider becoming tutors because there is such a need and it makes a positive, measurable impact.

Volunteer tutors attend a 10-hour training workshop and commit to work in the program for one year. Tutors are then matched with either an adult basic literacy learner or English language learner, and they work together at least once per week for one hour at a mutually convenient public place, such as the library. The literacy service is funded in part by the Ruth G. Hardman Endowment through the Tulsa Library Trust and a grant from the Oklahoma Department of Libraries.

La distancia entre nosotros por Reyna Grande

Cuando sus padres deciden cruzar ilegalmente la frontera mexicana en busca del sueño americano, Reyna y sus hermanos se ven forzados a vivir con su abuela, mientras esperan que sus padres regresen para comenzar una nueva vida junto a ellos. Pero las cosas no salen como lo planearon, y Reyna debe preparar su propia travesía hacia El Otro Lado, para vivir con el hombre que ha cautivado su imaginación durante años: su padre ausente.

La distancia entre nosotros es una historia divertida y desgarradora al mismo tiempo: nos muestra cómo es la experiencia de ser inmigrante y retrata a la perfección los desafíos y dificultades que Reyna y sus hermanos tuvieron que enfrentar para asimilar una nueva cultura, un nuevo idioma y una vida familiar en El Otro lado.

Al leer el libro sentía que estaba con ella en algún lugar mientras me hablaba de su historia. La autora logra demostrar esa evolución que van teniendo los personajes a lo largo de los años. La verdad es que Reyna, es un claro ejemplo de aquel dicho de "Triunfa el que quiere, se daña el que puede." Este libro es para adultos.

Yaqui Delgado quiere darte una paliza por Meg Medina

Una mañana antes de ir a clase, una niña le dice a Piddy Sánchez que Yaqui Delgado la odia y que quiere darle una paliza. Piddy ni siquiera sabe quién es Yaqui, y mucho menos qué es lo que ha hecho para hacerla enfadar. Se dice que Yaqui piensa que Piddy es una estirada, que se menea al caminar y que no es lo suficiente latina dada su piel blanca, sus buenas calificaciones y su falta de acento. ¿Existe alguna forma de que Piddy sobreviva sin aislarse o sin escapar? En esta novela fuertemente realista, Meg Medina retrata a una heroína solidaria que es forzada a decidir quién es verdaderamente.

El título me intrigó mucho. Es uno de esos títulos que cuentan una historia y hacen que el lector se pregunte: "¿Quién es Yaqui Delgado y por qué me tiene coraje? Me gustó que hablara del acoso escolar, de las relaciones entre madres e hijas, de los padres ausentes e incluso de los cambios en nuestras vidas y cómo los afrontamos. Este libro es para jóvenes.

Manos que bailan por Margarita Engle

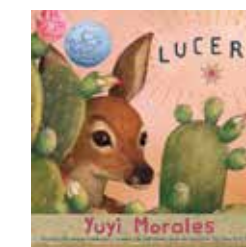

De niña, a Teresa Carreño le encantaba dejar que sus manos bailaran a lo largo de las hermosas teclas del piano. Si se sentía triste, la música le levantaba el ánimo.

Mis dos pueblos fronterizos por David Bowles

La vida de un niño estadounidense que aún mantiene estrechos lazos con su herencia mexicana.

Lucero por Yuyi Morales

Este título logra una hermosa unidad entre imagen e historia. junta fragmentos y texturas con las que su autora se ha topado a lo largo de su investigación sobre el peligroso entorno de la frontera.

Un pájaro en casa por Blanca Gómez

Conmovedora historia sobre el amor, la fascinación por la naturaleza, y sobre cómo dejar marchar.

Oídos a la tierra: Taller para compartir historias

Jueves, 13 de octubre • 6-7:30p.m.
Biblioteca Nathan Hale
6038 E. 23rd St.

Únete a nosotros para un taller de narración con el Centro de Recursos Hispanos y Tulsa Artist Fellow Francheska Alcántara. Visite y comparta con otros miembros de la comunidad sobre el poder de poseer nuestras narrativas y reclamar nuestras historias de origen.

Oídos a la tierra: Una etnografía de material, sonido y conversaciones es un proyecto multimedia que busca puntos de encuentro y solidaridad en Tulsa entre las comunidades negras y latinas. Este proyecto explora la intersección de las identidades africanas y latinas a través de la investigación de la geografía material y sonora de estas comunidades. Además, busca en el archivo y documenta las conversaciones sobre el terreno entre los habitantes de Tulsa para aprender sobre la historia, el lugar, las similitudes, las diferencias y la visión de nuevas posibilidades para estas comunidades.
